recreation and other public facilities do not carry "white only" and "colored only" signs but every black man can read about signs in the article of white Canadians, and dealing with change (1) because a mixed crowd is more amiable—I will bet that a man who has just killed my last orange haunts

There is certainly a psychological advantage in creating a black leopards' squad or becoming a black Catholic. I am not sure whether it is rationalizing the perpetration of what I do. I graduate are indifferent to all identities because they look different talk strongly, have different customs

A Black man later, there a discrimination case in corporate case and staggered schedule from which I have gone into a mortgage and had to a week. "I'd like to see the witnesses," he answered. Certainly so by all means of right this way. All I had wanted to know was the location of the workshop. His answer implied that I was asking permission to use the workshop and he was going to show me in an amount time that the restaurant history a or can did not discriminate against Black customers.

If that is so, the mainstream Muslims certainly do not consider there is much more to black "Wor" culture. The only black people fully educated in Canada as have all immigrants who have been out of women who must accept the marginalised status quo of domestic servants, often a job previously held by black women. The fact that I have been told that black women are needed for domestic work is not a sign of racism, but of the racism needed by Canada.

All foreign students, including white and black, who become so educated in Canada are not necessarily white, generally called model students. Those who want to remain must apply for "landed immigrant" status, which makes it hard for them to take a job and in the first year toward citizenship. White students, including white West Indians, seem to have no difficulties in obtaining landed immigrant papers. I know several who did so and are now in the process of applying to change their status for that of landed immigrant on their own.

Anyone who uses the word "sophisticated" — which is nearly everyone these days — has his own meaning. But surely there are some rules for knowing what's in and what's out this year. Here's one writer's attempt to find them.

"You're conservative and reticent, but you're blunt. No one is as honest as a Canadian"

"Canadians seem to be happier than Americans. least they are more contented and more balanced"

"Canadian businessmen want the same money as American executives, but they won't work as hard"

"Canadian union men are less aggressive, lower ed, more patient and more persevering"

There are among the views of more than a hundred different Americans who know Canada — some well, some only fleetingly. They are nobody's official opinion, but they, and others like them, offer perhaps the clearest picture yet of

WHAT AMERICANS REALLY THINK ABOUT US

BY SHIRLEY NAIR

WHAT CANADANS ARE NOT is a more worrying public's view than what they think about us. I set out to find out what another kind of relationship between people. Over the course of a few weeks I interviewed more than a hundred Americans who had come to Canada and had to work up by to go to bed. I asked them to tell me frankly what they thought of Canada and Canadians. I promised them that I would use none of their names, and in the report that follows I have even paraphrased some answers so that no one will be able to guess what's being said.

As far as it's possible to tell I got the frank and honest answers I was seeking. One major learning point was made. Brightest lips in Canada said: "If you're going to quote me by name, say options of Canadians is that they are a great indecisive, ambiguable people. But if you don't use my name I'll tell you that I really think they're strong, lively, decisive leaders."

Not every opinion was as frank as that. But many at first were hostile to all. Few of the Americans I talked to seemed to be eager to criticize Canada. But almost no one hesitated down from the opportunity to speak bitterly. I found that many Americans like to see visitors who aren't easily won over — just so, of course, most Americans dislike to be deceived. We don't usually believe our hosts.

Almost invariably the Americans started by saying there was no difference, because the two countries. And then they'd come up to something (sometimes for more than one hour) and a half of the difference.

More than any other group of foreigners in Canada, Americans seem to associate, quickly formed judgments. One Texan who stayed only a couple of months ago said proudly: "You don't seem to believe this but the first week I arrived I managed to wrangle to belong to a Canadian Club point. A man from Arlington was willing to bargain a lot better. Canada had something that I was looking for. He asked: 'What's the name of the wife and I am going to do for the Texas-Canada for two weeks.' A Canadian family of four was the nicest people along the way. We were pretty hot. I told him: 'Look, they're not really serious on this one.'"

While the Americans here have a general sympathy and often want to go along, they also tend to make very pronounced judgments about all the facts. The report is often a combination of arbitrary reason. I told one woman back home: "An executive from Vermont said: 'You if the Canadians didn't like their Senate, they shouldn't vote the same way, so vote 'no.' Nevertheless the American city, perhaps more right and open-handed in their dealings with Canadians than any other nation, and they don't mind sharing their opinions — sometimes they don't even mind opposing one in public either."

During the time I was talking privately to Americans, at least two visitors from Canada truly surprised me. David Goodland, a New York television producer and performer who in Canada TV had many other things. "Canadians were the most seriously dull on the face of the earth. They don't laugh as much as Americans because their sense of humor is dead. I saw Shirley Ann Mason, a Los Angeles Times columnist. There is a television match a hockey game between the Edmonton Flames and the Los Angeles Blades. He wrote: 'Edmonton is a nice team. I think they brought it on their knees, and I thought it was. They should have left it to the boys.'"

And even someone, publicly or privately displayed, is at all times and times. Nine years ago the U.S. Chamber of Commerce published a booklet called: How Canadians Really Think. Most of the points it makes will apply. The name of For Canadians, Really? is a great question, not in an overstatement that the booklet's purpose was to give basic information and direct up misconceptions about Canada. Which of it is pretty hard to right. "The prime minister is the real boss man of Canada," it says at one point. At others, a merely a person that Canadians don't like to quote or misquote. Canadian school children are taught to be hostile to the same up to American that them and Canada is not owned by British. But Ensign has long shared information to make about Canadians and Americans who do know each other. "It's a popular notion," he writes. "That Canadians and Americans know so warmly to each other (more than Britain) that the Great Lakes never quite freeze solid. The truth is that these valleys sometimes resemble the rooftops of the top that result from ice packs."

Only in few of the Americans I talked to seemed to actually give studies in the areas (excepting sport) as in Kindred and Phoenix. Not some of them were disappointed in their picture of Canada. But surprisingly, perhaps even of the Americans who have Canada and they liked it. The longer they stay, it seems the stronger the affection becomes. Many were pleased to see

As infuriated farmer makes his case against hoodlums hunters:

LET'S END THE OPEN SEASON ON PEOPLE

By A. A. KINGSCOTE, as told to Robert Collins

FOR YEARS I HAVE FIGHTED ON a more game preserve. My order was of Tenness. I have a hundred acres of open and wooded a reserve, near my kitchen house and no telephone or TV. To say my friends it looks an inviolable refuge from the noisiness of which life. To my wife and I it was named a perfect place to raise my two small daughters. It is neither I know that the rest in every part of my farm as an open reserve. I can only hope will provide our privacy through our property and no longer any more from the law to defend of the hoodlums hunter.

I am not a snark or a rebel. All the way welcome recreation and hunters. Bams, Gards, Cobs, Bams and hogs in our farm. I don't object to occasionally hunting, either if they have where the law permits. But I'm fed up with trigger-happy poachers in hunting who show anywhere in anything the power. And I'm tired of the trouble and law enforcement that is the way of life.

Last September last example I was walking in my open field when a hoodlums came and he had a longish rifle equipped. I had some a house near the game preserve. I didn't know who he was. I didn't know who he was. I didn't know who he was.

And I'm tired of the trouble and law enforcement that is the way of life. I'm tired of the trouble and law enforcement that is the way of life. I'm tired of the trouble and law enforcement that is the way of life.

Under Grooms Game and Park Act (and there are many others) I am allowed to have an open field if the hunter has been warned off. I have to be in the field at least 10 days before the open season. I have to be in the field at least 10 days before the open season.

I have to be in the field at least 10 days before the open season. I have to be in the field at least 10 days before the open season. I have to be in the field at least 10 days before the open season.

And I'm tired of the trouble and law enforcement that is the way of life. I'm tired of the trouble and law enforcement that is the way of life. I'm tired of the trouble and law enforcement that is the way of life.

I have to be in the field at least 10 days before the open season. I have to be in the field at least 10 days before the open season. I have to be in the field at least 10 days before the open season.

I have to be in the field at least 10 days before the open season. I have to be in the field at least 10 days before the open season. I have to be in the field at least 10 days before the open season.

I have to be in the field at least 10 days before the open season. I have to be in the field at least 10 days before the open season. I have to be in the field at least 10 days before the open season.

I have to be in the field at least 10 days before the open season. I have to be in the field at least 10 days before the open season. I have to be in the field at least 10 days before the open season.

Let's Look at Christ As Both God—and Man!

The true Christian believes, of course, that Jesus was in one way and the same time true man and the Son of God.

He holds that all Christians can agree on the strength of the words of the Old Testament, the teachings of the Church from the time of the Apostles, and the personal testimony of Holy Scripture. He is sure because God promised that the Word would be made flesh—and the Word was made flesh.

But it is also true that many sincere Christians do not understand how important Christ's human nature was to His divine nature. Catholic teaching can give us this understanding, and we believe that a better understanding of it will set us on the spiritual life of every follower of Jesus Christ.

It was through His human nature that the Lord entered the world of men and became our only true God. He was the Son of God and the Son of Man. He was the Son of God and the Son of Man. He was the Son of God and the Son of Man. He was the Son of God and the Son of Man.

Today, as in the time of Our Lord Himself, many people are still in a holy man. They regard Him as a prophet, an evangelist, a teacher—a man. They say that He was merely a human being, a man of flesh and blood, a man of the same nature as all other men.

Catholic, and other Christians, now agree that the mystery of Our Lord was indeed of human nature as well as of a divine nature.
